

TRANSLATE INTO FRENCH - I

1. One of the most famous surgeons in town has been charged with money laundering.
2. The latest news is tragic and there is likely to be extensive damage.
3. She must be absent-minded — she's put her blouse on back to front.
4. Would you like some more fruit, you've hardly had anything to eat.
5. There is no denying the foreign trade deficit badly needs making up.
6. From beginning to end, I tried to tell him he was speaking to the wrong person.
7. He made a fuss, claiming that such a programme did not fit prime time television at all.
8. Let's hope he will be given as much useful information and advice as possible.
9. Although he is starving, he won't go to a soup kitchen.
10. He is apt to forget his appointments and he is sure to forget today's.
11. I can't believe they were robbed of all their luggage at the station last night.
12. He is said to have been a spy during the cold war between the East and the West.
13. I rather agree with those who hold that democracy is the political counterpart of a free trade economy.
14. Once again, he's kept her awake — this really is the last straw.
15. I won't go — for one thing, I'm broke, and besides, I'm not on speaking terms with Jenny.
16. They are bound to realize that shifting from a state-run economy to a free-market one is not all that easy.
17. I'd rather you listened to me and ignored her daft remarks.